DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSIONS: November 15th, 2017

E-mail for abstract submission: cunymilanconference@gmail.com

CUNY-Milan Annual Interdisciplinary Workshop in Philosophy, a joint initiative of both institutions' philosophy departments, is aimed at promoting advanced studies in core analytic topics. This year's workshop, first in a series of annual events, will focus on belief. Albeit this workshop's main objective is to advance research in Philosophy of Mind and Logic, the organizers are committed to maintain the interdisciplinary character of the workshop.

This year's inaugural conference will focus on belief. It is the aim of the organizers to provide an interdisciplinary perspective on the topic of belief. Some of the topics to be discussed include:

Mental states/attitudes and beliefs; the connection between imagination and belief; group beliefs; logic of belief; belief and logical omniscience; beliefs about blame and forgiveness; the difference between conscious and unconscious beliefs; confabulations of belief; the experience of belief; what it is like to believe; norms of beliefs; knowledge and belief; metaphysics of belief; religious beliefs; political beliefs; manipulation of belief; content of belief; belief and bias; belief and language; belief as constituting sexual, racial and gender based identity; delusional beliefs; continental perspectives on belief; historical perspectives on belief.

Submissions of abstracts (approx. 500 to 1000 words) are invited from current PhD students working in philosophy or a related field on the topic of belief. In the spirit of interdisciplinary research and interinstitutional collaboration, we have reserved two slots for contributing papers from early career researchers (PhD awarded after 2012), though our focus is on student presentations. The talks should be suitable for a 30 minute presentation. Abstracts will be reviewed by members of the organizing committee. We strongly encourage submissions from women and other under-represented groups in philosophy. Feel free to indicate in your email if you are a member of such a group.
